

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Grandma always reads me folk tales!

Learning Outcome

Describe hypothetical situations in written and spoken interactions according to social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- What stories do you remember from your childhood?
- What was it about the stories that you liked?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about myths and legends.
- I can talk about things that are being done or have been done.
- I can quote other people.

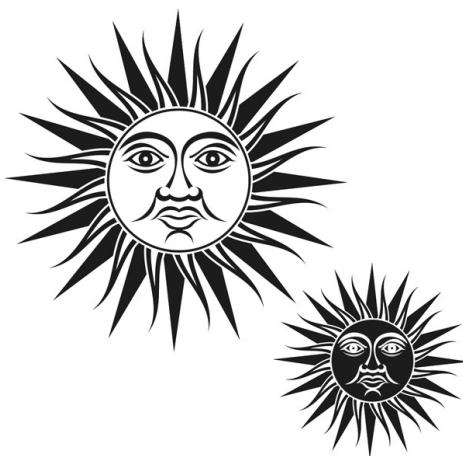

Let's Explore!

The sun thinks having a test subject would be just the ticket!

* "Just the ticket" means that this is exactly what is needed.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

So here's an old myth. It's vaguely based on a fable by Aesop, the Greek storyteller who told tales with morals attached. It's kind of fun!

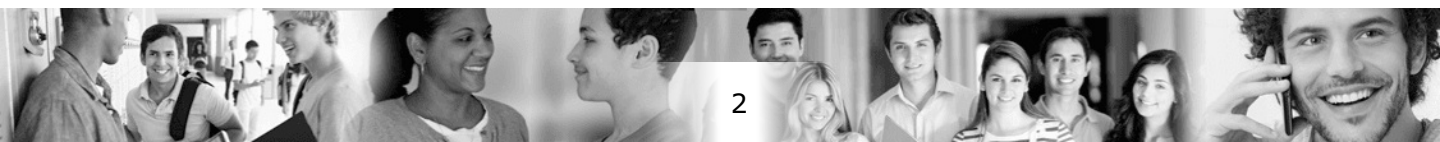

The wind and the sun are talking. They're being a little hot-headed. The air has been moved by the wind for eons. The Earth has been warmed by the sun for endless time. Now, the question of who is actually stronger is being discussed.

The sun asks if the wind would be around without shifting temperatures. The wind retorts that without a cooling breeze, the Earth would certainly burn. After polite insults have been exchanged, they notice a traveler coming down the road. The sun suggests that having a test subject would be just the ticket. The wind queries whether anyone would ever agree with the sun.

A cloak has been draped over the traveler's shoulders. The sun says that whichever of them makes the traveler take off his cloak is the stronger of the two. The wind accepts the challenge.

Then, the sun is being directed to hide while the wind struts his stuff. He blows as hard as he can but the traveler isn't being persuaded to remove his cloak. The wind asks himself why the traveler was wrapping his cloak around himself even tighter. Finally the wind gives up. The sun comes gliding out. He shines down upon the traveler, who soon finds it hot, then takes off his cloak.

The sun, beaming at the wind, says he had always known that gentle persuasion was better than force.

Let's Practice!

Let's take a look back at some things that have happened in this old story.

Instructions: Match the sentences on the left with their missing parts on the right.

- | | |
|------------------------------|--|
| 1. The air has been moved | a. by the sun for endless time. |
| 2. The Earth has been warmed | b. being persuaded to remove his cloak |
| 3. The wind and the sun are | c. over the traveler's shoulders. |
| 4. A cloak has been draped | d. being a little hot-headed. |
| 5. The traveler isn't | e. by the for eons. |

Let's Practice!

Do you remember what the sun said to the moon?

Instructions: Organize the mystery sentences. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

- shifting / would / temperatures. / the / sun / wind / if / be / without / around / The / asks

- The / breeze, / retorts / certainly / without / burn. / Earth / that / cooling / wind / would / a / the

- ticket. / sun the / a / having / subject / would / that / The / just / suggests / be / test

- cloak / of / is / the / The / of / his / take / the / traveller / the / makes / off / sun / stronger / that / says / whichever / them / two.

- his / . / why / even / around / cloak / The / traveller / was / himself / wind / asks / himself / wrapping / the / tighter

Extension Activity

Read another Aesop fable.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Go to the library or online to find another fable by Aesop.
- Read the tale and write down the main ideas.
- Rewrite the fable, using your own words to tell the story.
- Read your version of the story to a partner.
- Takes turns with your partner reading the tale again, beginning with 'He said', to quote what is in it.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I read another fable by Aesop and make notes.

☐ ☐

I rewrite the story using my notes.

☐ ☐

I share the story with a partner.

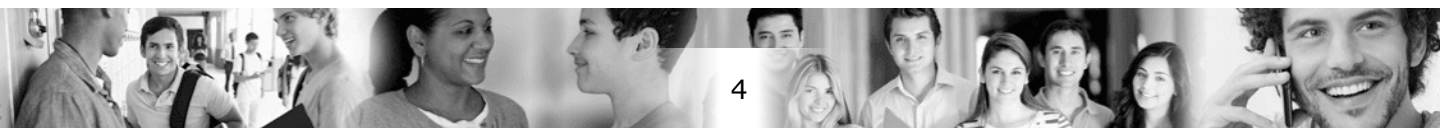

☐ ☐

I reread the story, beginning each sentence with 'He said' and using reported speech.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- myth (noun): a traditional story explaining the history of a people, and typically involving supernatural elements
e.g. So here's an old myth that is vaguely based on a fable by Aesop.
- fable (noun): a short story with animals as characters that usually conveys a moral e.g. Some myths are based on fables.
- Aesop (noun): A Greek storyteller who wrote many fables
e.g. Aesop told tales with morals attached.
- hot-headed (adjective): reacting to things quickly and without thinking carefully first e.g. They're being a little hot-headed.
- eon (noun): a period of time that is so long that it cannot be measured e.g. The air has been moved by the wind for eons.
- to shift (verb): to move or change from one position or direction to another e.g. The sun asks if the wind would be around without shifting temperatures.
- to retort (verb): to answer someone quickly
e.g. The wind retorts that without a cooling breeze, the Earth would certainly burn.
- insult (noun): an offensive remark or action
e.g. After polite insults have been exchanged, they notice a traveler coming down the road.
- to query (verb): to ask a question about something, especially to verify its accuracy
e.g. The wind queries whether anyone would ever agree with the sun.
- to glide (verb): to move easily without stopping and without effort or noise
e.g. The sun comes gliding out.

Learning Points

The Passive: The Present Continuous and Present Perfect Tenses

You use the Present Continuous to talk about an action that is happening at the time of speaking. The action or event is in progress.

They're being a little hot-headed.

You use the Present Perfect to talk about a finished action or event with present consequences. There is a connection between what happened in the past and the present.

The wind has moved the air for eons.

You often choose the passive form when you want to talk about an action but are not so interested in saying who or what does/did it. Passives without agents (the doers) are common in storytelling.

Look at the chart below for the structure of the passive voice.

Name	Structure	Example
Present Continuous	am/are/is + being + past participle	Then, the sun is being directed to hide while the wind struts his stuff.
Present Perfect	have/has + been + past participle	The air has been moved by the wind for eons.

Examples:

- The Earth has been warmed by the sun for endless time.
- Then, the sun is being directed to hide while the wind struts his stuff.
- The traveler isn't being persuaded to remove his cloak.
- After polite insults have been exchanged, they notice a traveler coming down the road.
- The air has been moved by the wind for eons. The Earth has been warmed by the sun for endless time.
- Now, the question of who is actually stronger is being discussed.

Reported Speech and Questions

You use reported speech (indirect speech) when you are saying (reporting) what other people said.

This style of writing is common in storytelling. It allows the writer to share dialogue with the reader without always using quotation marks.

When you tell people what someone has said you generally make the verb tense 'more in the past' since we are reporting the information at a later time. You need to change the verb to the next past form.

Learning Points

For example:

Direct speech	Reported speech
"I like him."	He said he liked him.
"I'm coming to the party."	He said he was coming .
"I already ate ."	He said he had already eaten.
"I can cook."	He told me he could cook.

You have to change the pronoun if you are reporting what someone else said. Compare these two sentences. In each case the person actually said "I don't want to go."

- I said, "I don't want to go." > I said I didn't want to go.
- Bill said, "I don't want to go." > Bill said he didn't want to go.

When you want to report questions asked, the subject normally comes before the verb.

Direct: Where is the sun?

Indirect: The wind asked where the sun was.

When the question is a yes/no question, you use if or whether to report it.

The sun asks if/whether the wind would be around without shifting temperatures.

Look at the chart below to see the changes in verb tense.

Direct speech	Reported speech
Simple Present	Simple Past
Present Progressive	Past Progressive
Simple Past	Past Perfect
Present Perfect	Past Perfect
Past Progressive	Past Perfect Progressive
Future Simple (will)	Conditional (would)
Modal Can	Modal Could
Modal May	Modal Might

Learning Points

Examples:

- The sun asks if the wind would be around without shifting temperatures. The wind retorts that without a cooling breeze, the Earth would certainly burn.
- The sun suggests that having a test subject would be just the ticket. The wind queries whether anyone would ever agree with the sun.
- The sun says that whichever of them makes the traveler take off his cloak is the stronger of the two.
- The wind asks himself why the traveler was wrapping his cloak around himself even tighter.
- The sun, beaming at the wind, says he had always known that gentle persuasion was better than force.

