

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Pronunciation Spot: I would have loved to live in ancient Greece!

Learning Outcome

Describe hypothetical situations in written and spoken interactions according to social contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about myths and legends.
- I can say and use fare and fair.
- I can say and use could've and would've.

Ask your partner:

- What period in history do you find interesting?
- If you had the chance to go back to that time, would you? Why or why not?

Let's Explore!

Charon* is the ferryman on the River Styx.

* In mythology, "Charon" carries souls of the newly deceased across the river Styx to the world of the dead.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

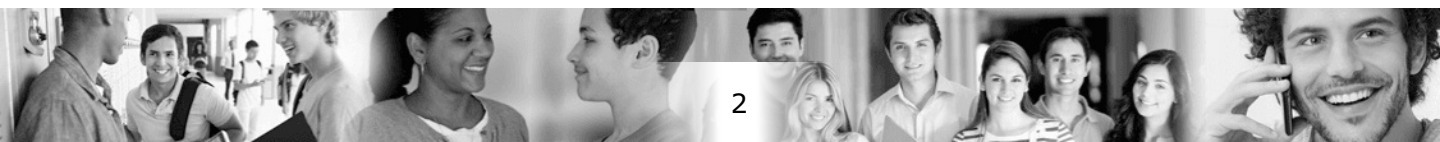

Fairy tales, myths and legends have many things in common. Often strange, magical things happen in them. Children are awed by these odd stories. They wonder if they really could've happened and what they would've done in the hero or heroine's place.

They sit and weigh the choices these extraordinary people have made on their way to fight dragons, rescue princesses, or right wrongs. Those that think they could've slayed the huge fiery beast act out the deed. Those that think things might've gone differently, write an alternate version, changing the outcome.

I would've loved to have lived in ancient Greece. Perhaps I could've seen the thousand ships launch to bring the fair Helen home from Troy. Although the war they fought would've been horrific rather than romantic, when we look back at what they wore and how they lived, we do romanticize it.

Imagine watching Charon as he collected the fare to cross the River Styx. Hercules took a ride on that ferry and returned! The Greeks must have believed such things could have happened.

A friend of mine swore that a fairy came to visit her every night before she went to sleep. I myself dreamt of knights, and jousting. I would've gone back in time to join them if I could have. As an adult, I realize that the legend and the reality of life in days of yore are miles apart.

Let's Practice!

Paying a fare to ride with the ferryman? That sounds fair!

Instructions: Organize the mystery word. Read the words aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

- | | |
|--------------------------|-----------|
| 1. y / r / e / r / f | — — — — |
| 2. o / w / e / r | — — — — |
| 3. e / w / i / t / r | — — — — — |
| 4. d / o / d | — — — — |
| 5. u / r / y / o | — — — — |
| 6. s / t / n / g / i / h | — — — — — |
| 7. i / r / a / f | — — — — |
| 8. a / y / w | — — — — |

Let's Practice!

Sometimes stories can be confusing.

Instructions: Proofread the sentences. Correct the mistake. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

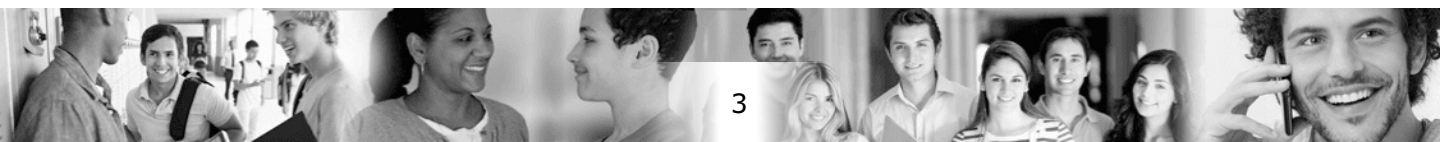

- Fairy tales, mites and legions have many things in common.

- Often strange, magic tongues happen in them.

- People have dreamt of fighting dragons, rescuing princesses, or wringing rites.

- When we look back at what they wore and how they lived, we do remember it.

- I myself dreamt of kites and jogging.

Extension Activity

Retell a Greek myth.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Look online or go to the library and choose a Greek myth.
- Read the story and take notes.
- Put the events on a timeline to help you retell the story.
- Note some places where you can use sound-alike words and could've/would've.
- Retell your myth to a partner, being especially careful with your pronunciation.

Self-Assessment

Yes No

I find a myth and take notes.

☐ ☐

I put the events on a timeline.

☐ ☐

I note places where I can use homonyms and reductions like could've/would've.

☐ ☐

I tell my myth to a partner using the timeline.

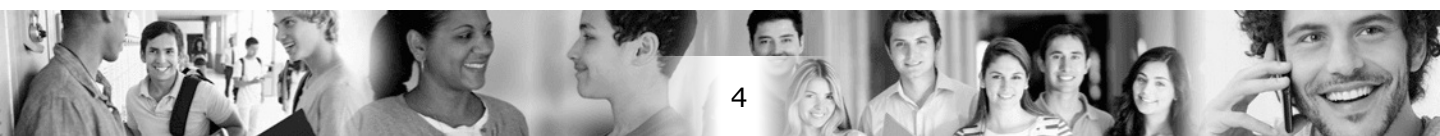

☐ ☐

I pay special attention to pronunciation.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- to awe (verb): to cause a feeling of great respect mixed with fear or surprise
e.g. Children are awed by these odd stories.
- to right wrongs (expression): to make amends to somebody for something.
e.g. Extraordinary people have made their way to fight dragons, rescue princesses, or right wrongs.
- to romanticize (verb): to talk about something in a way that makes it sound better than it really is e.g. When we look back at what they wore and how they lived, we do romanticize it.
- fare (noun): a fee paid for a journey
e.g. Imagine watching Charon as he collected the fare to cross the River Styx.
- to swear (verb): to promise or say that you are telling the truth e.g. A friend of mine swore that a fairy came to visit her every night before she went to sleep.
- knight (noun): a man of high social position trained to fight as a soldier on a horse e.g. I myself dreamt of knights riding their horses.
- to joust (verb): to fight with a lance while riding on a horse, especially as a sport e.g. I dreamt of knights, and jousting.
- to launch (verb): to set something in motion
e.g. I could've seen the thousand ships launch to bring the fair Helen home from Troy.
- to be miles apart (expression): being at odds with what is actually happening
e.g. I realize that the legend and the reality of life in days of yore are miles apart.

Learning Points

Using Homonyms and Homophones

Homonyms are made up of homophones and homographs.

A homophone is a word that has the same sound as another word but has a different meaning and may have a different spelling.

For example:

right and write

right (noun) and right (adjective)

Examples:

- Children are awed by these odd stories. (awed/odd)
- They sit and weigh the choices these extraordinary people have made on their way to fight dragons. (weigh/way)
- People have made on their way to fight dragons, rescue princesses, or right wrongs. Those that think things might've gone differently, write an alternate version. (right/write)
- Although the war they fought would've been horrific rather than romantic, when we look back at what they wore and how they lived, we do romanticize it. (war/wore)
- As an adult, I realize that the legend and the reality of life in days of yore are miles apart. What's your opinion? (yore/your)

Learning Points

Reduction of Have in Past Modals and in Auxiliary Verbs

When you use auxiliary verbs like have, it is common to reduce it in conversation.

In English, not every word or syllable is pronounced fully.

When you reduce the sound of have it sounds like uv or iv.

Read each sentence in its full form:

I would have loved to have lived in ancient Greece.

Perhaps I could have seen the thousand ships launch to bring the fair Helen home from Troy.

The Greeks must have believed such things could have happened.

Now read them and reduce the pronunciation of the auxiliary verb have:

I would've loved to have lived in ancient Greece. would_uv

Perhaps I could've seen the thousand ships launch to bring the fair Helen home from Troy. could_uv

The Greeks must've believed such things could have happened. must_uv

Examples:

- They wonder if they really could've happened and what they would've done in the hero or heroine's place.
- Those that think they could've slayed the huge fiery beast act out the deed.
- Those that think things might've gone differently, write an alternate version, changing the outcome.
- I would've loved to have lived in ancient Greece.
- Perhaps I could've seen the thousand ships launch to bring the fair Helen home from Troy.
- The war they fought would've been horrific rather than romantic.
- The Greeks must have believed such things could have happened.
- I would've gone back in time to join them if I could have.